

Tulsi releases debut single, calls albums tiring

Torsha Sen
torsha.sen@hindustantimes.com

After delivering the hit number Saiyyan Superstar in Sunny Leone's recent film, singer Tulsi Kumar is ready to launch her first single, titled All Of Me. "I have collaborated with Arjun, a UK-based rapper, and we have reworked my song Baarish (Yaariyaan, 2014). He has added English rap to certain portions of the song. We have also shot a video for the song, and we will be releasing it soon," says Tulsi.

Ask her what made her venture into independent music and the singer, who has sung songs such as Piya Aaye Na (Aashiqui 2, 2013), Kuch To Hua Hai (Singham 2, 2014), Tu Hai Ki Nahi (Unplugged) (Roy, 2015), says, "The concept of

The concept of singles, which is prevalent in the West, is coming here in a big way and I think this will open a lot of avenues for talent in India independent music is coming back in a very big way. Initially, there used to be albums with about eight to nine songs, but that was time consuming and working on so many songs used to be very tiring." Talking about the way forward, she says, "The concept of singles, which is prevalent in the West, is coming here in a big way and I think this will open a lot of avenues for talent in India," she says.

Tulsi Kumar, singer

Although Tulsi has shifted to Delhi post marriage, she visits Mumbai for work. "I spend one week in Mumbai every month to work on my projects," she says.